Camp Guidelines for Boys

Boys to Men Mentorship Camp, an initiative of Potential Unexplored Ltd

A guide to help you get the most from your week | Version 1 | November 2026

Why you are here

Picture yourself a few years from now. You know who you are, where you are going and the plan to get there. You are focused at school, confident among people, and in charge of your temper and your choices. You stand with your brothers, and you serve your family, your community, your country and Africa.

That young man begins to be built in a week like this one. Most people learn these lessons slowly, through years of trial and costly mistakes. At the Boys to Men Mentorship Camp, you learn them early, from mentors who have walked the road before you, and alongside brothers who are walking it with you. Many boys never get this chance. You have it, and you are fortunate.

Here is some of what the week is about, among other things.

- Knowing yourself. Who you are, what you are good at and what you are for.
- A vision and a plan. A clear picture of where you want to be, and the steps to get there.
- Focus at school. Seeing how your studies connect to the life you want.
- Freedom from what pulls you down. Standing strong against bad habits, addiction and pressure from friends.
- A healthy mind. Healing old hurts, dropping beliefs that hold you back, and handling your anger well.
- Confidence, voice and leadership. Speaking with courage, leading with respect, and honouring girls and women.
- Money, business and networks. Practical sessions that show you how money works and how to start something of your own.
- Brotherhood and belonging. Standing with other boys, and serving your family, community, nation and Africa with pride.

You will learn through games that carry a lesson, real situations you act out, stories, drawing the life you want, and questions you are free to ask. You will meet several mentors and guest speakers. The Uganda Police facilitate the session on Law and Order, and the sessions may cover many more topics, including health and responsible living. After the camp, we follow your progress, and an alumni network keeps you connected with brothers who stand with you.

Your week begins at 6:00am with reading, exercise and self-care, and you will do it free of the pull of a phone. On the closing Saturday, your parents and family arrive and you take part in the coronation. They will see a son who stands straighter, speaks clearer and listens longer.

Adulthood will not wait for you to be ready. This week is your chance to get ready, on purpose. Now it is your turn. Please read these guidelines with your parent or guardian. If you are younger, ask them to read them aloud to you. At the end, you will both sign.

What the camp is, and what it is not

This is not a military camp, and it is not a disciplinary camp. Nobody is here to be punished. You will be treated with respect, and you will be given room to learn and to grow.

The camp does hold the highest standards of discipline, and this is what we mean. Discipline is not fear. It is doing the right thing, at the right time, in the right way, even when nobody is watching. It is keeping your word, finishing what you start and owning what you do. These habits make a man trusted. We practise them together from the first day, so whatever your age, you will not be doing it alone. Your mentors and your brothers are right there with you.

Ten habits for a strong week

These are simple habits that make the week better for you and for everyone around you. You may already live many of them. At the camp, we practise them together.

1. Give it your best. Take part fully in every session. The more you put in, the more you carry home.
2. Be on time. Sessions, meals and activities start together, and arriving on time means you miss nothing.
3. Respect everyone. Boys, mentors, cooks, drivers and the staff of the school where we stay all help the week happen, and each one deserves your respect.
4. Tell the truth. Honesty, even when it is hard, is what earns a man trust.
5. Say sorry quickly. When you get something wrong, an honest sorry followed by putting it right wins respect.
6. Say thank you. People notice it, and it opens doors for you.
7. Do your share. Everyone has a part in running the camp, and doing yours without being reminded is the mark of a man.
8. Look after the younger boys. Be the kind of brother you would want beside you. We have no bullying and no laughing at anyone.
9. Stay with your group. Look after yourself and tell a mentor before you go anywhere, so we always know you are safe.
10. Speak up when something worries you. Help us keep the camp free of alcohol, tobacco, drugs, weapons and anything unsuitable.

Doing our share

The camp runs like a big home, and a home works well when everyone has a hand in it. Sharing the work is part of your training, and it is also a way of saying thank you to the people who care for us.

- Where you stay. You look after your room, your bed, your bag and your surroundings each day, and your mentors will show you the standard to aim for.
- Your plate and cup. You wash your own plate and cup after every meal.
- Meals. A team of staff prepares lunch for everyone. At other times, boys take turns to help prepare breakfast and dinner, and everyone joins in washing the utensils.

- The place. Keep the toilets, the compound and the shared spaces clean. We are guests in a school that belongs to others, so we leave clean what we use, and we help to mend what we break.
- Closing day. On the closing Saturday, you help to receive your parents and family members. You welcome them, guide them and serve them. It is your day, and it is also your chance to honour the people who sent you.

Work done together goes quickly, and it feels lighter with brothers beside you. If you are one of the older boys, working beside the younger ones, not above them, shows them how.

Saying sorry and saying thank you

Everyone gets things wrong sometimes, mentors included. Saying sorry well is a strength, and it is a skill worth practising. A good apology is simple. Say what happened, say sorry without excuses, and do something to put it right. It works best face to face and soon after. You may find yourself saying sorry to a fellow boy, a mentor, a cook or a member of the school staff, and each time it gets easier.

Gratitude is just as powerful. There will be many people to thank, such as the cooks who feed you, the mentors who teach you, the school staff who host you and the boys who help you. Your parents will be there on the closing day too. A boy who says thank you easily is a boy people want to help.

How we treat each other

At the camp, every boy is a brother, and every boy has the right to feel safe and respected. That is why shouting, hitting, pushing, teasing and hurtful names have no place here. Nobody is forced to do what he does not want to do, and nobody is left out because of his tribe, religion, school, family or how he looks.

If you are one of the older boys or young men, the younger ones will look up to you, often without you noticing. Lead by example. Let them keep their things and do their own work, and if you see a younger boy being troubled, step in calmly or call a mentor.

What a boy shares in a session about himself or his family is his to share. Keeping it inside the group helps everyone feel free to speak. The only time a mentor passes something on is when a boy might be in danger, and then it is to keep him safe.

In the sessions

The days are full. Morning reading, aerobics and self-care begin at 6:00am, training and coaching sessions run through the day, and practical skilling follows in the afternoon. You will meet several mentors during the week, each with something different to give you. Officers of the Uganda Police Force facilitate the session on Law and Order.

- Arrive on time with your notebook and marker pens, so you are ready from the first minute.
- Sit where the facilitator suggests and keep your attention on the session. You will get far more from it.
- Ask questions. There is no foolish question at the camp, and often another boy was wondering the same.
- Take part in group work, and give others a chance to speak too.
- You are never forced to share a personal story in front of the group. Share only what you are ready to share.
- If something in a session upsets you, tell a mentor. You can step out quietly with a mentor if you need to.

Looking after yourself

- Eat the meals that are served, drink enough water, and rest when it is time to rest.
- Wash every day and keep your clothes and bedding clean.
- If you take any medicine, a mentor will keep it for you and give it at the right time. This keeps it safe and makes sure it is taken on time.
- If you feel sick, hurt or unhappy, tell a mentor at once. Do not wait. We will care for you and call your parent if needed.

Gadgets and contact with home

No electronic gadgets of any kind are expected at the camp. Please leave your phone, tablet, games, headphones and any other gadget at home. The camp cannot take responsibility for any that are lost or damaged. This helps you give your full attention to the week and to the brothers around you.

You are free to speak to any member of the team whenever you want. For now, Eduardo and Patricia are at the forefront, and the management will introduce you to the others. You may call or go to any of them. If you need to speak to your parent or guardian, tell a mentor and we will help you.

Staying safe

These are here to protect you, and they apply to everyone at the camp, adults included.

- Stay with your group. Never leave the school compound without the knowledge of the leadership team.
- You sleep in a room with boys of your own age group. Young men aged 18 and above sleep apart from the boys under 18.
- You wash and change in private. No one should enter a bathroom or changing area while you are using it.
- Your body belongs to you. No adult and no other boy may touch you in a way that makes you feel uncomfortable, or ask you to touch them. Nobody may show you pictures or videos that are sexual or violent.
- No adult should be alone with you out of sight of others. If someone tries, say no, walk away and tell another mentor.
- Nobody should ask you to keep a secret, give you gifts, or message you privately. If they do, please tell us.
- Never take or share photographs of another boy.

If something worries you

Telling someone is brave, and it is never wrong. Nobody will be punished for speaking up.

1. Tell a person you trust. This can be any mentor, Eduardo, Patricia, or anyone the management has introduced to you as part of the team. You do not have to wait for a special time.
2. Say it in your own words. You do not need the right words. Just tell us what happened.
3. Know that some things cannot be kept secret. If keeping something quiet would leave you or another boy in danger, we have to tell the person whose job is to keep you safe. We will tell you before we do.
4. Know that we will act. We will make sure you are safe, and we will deal with the matter fairly.

After the camp, you or your parent can still call or write to the people at the end of this page.

If things go off track

Every boy has a bad moment now and then. We believe each of you can reach the standard, so when something goes off track, our first aim is to help you put it right. We take it step by step.

1. A calm conversation. A mentor talks with you privately, listens to your side and helps you see what to change.
2. Putting it right. You say sorry where it is due and repair what was harmed. A small extra duty, such as helping to clean or serve, may be added so that you make it up to the group.
3. Working with your parent or guardian. If the same problem continues, the team speaks with your parent or guardian so that all of us support you together.
4. Going home. Only if a boy puts himself or others in serious danger, or keeps refusing to follow the guidelines, the team may ask his parent or guardian to collect him. In that case the fee paid is not refunded. We hope it never comes to this.

We never beat, shout at, shame or starve a boy, and we never take away his sleep. Every boy gets a fair chance to make things right.
